

Unified Endpoint Management

Increasingly mobile employees, the advent of hybrid devices, and a new generation of digital natives preferring device diversity: This is why a unified approach to enterprise endpoint management is rapidly becoming an IT and business necessity. Without it, IT departments are left to manage multiple systems that penalize people's desire for using multiple devices to complete their work, and which make everyone less productive.

Fortunately, there is a solution: Unified Endpoint Management, licensed on a per user basis, as envisioned by Gartner. With its new suite of Unified Endpoint Management solutions, Matrix42 is now a vendor on the market that can deliver on that vision.

Unified Endpoint Management

Key Benefits

- 1 For organisations
 - Lower cost device management by eliminating the need to run two separate endpoint management systems
 - A permanently lower per employee cost base through user-based licensing, no matter how many different endpoints are used
 - Happier, more productive employees with the freedom to use more devices at no extra cost
- 2 For IT departments
 - Accelerated, simplified device management through a single administration console, for all PCs, laptops, hybrid and mobile endpoints
 - Secure access to corporate IT resources from trusted and untrusted devices
 - Scalable, unified user-based endpoint management that is future-proofed against endpoint proliferation and increasing device diversity
- 3 For users
 - Increased freedom of device selection and usage
 - Greater productivity with access to one unified workspace from any endpoint
 - Transparent, efficient IT services from order, to replacement or retirement

Core Features

- 1 Single, unified management console
 - Provides one universal management console to provision CLM and EMM capable endpoints
- 2 Automated/hybrid CLM & EMM
 - Auto-enables CLM & EMM management after the endpoint registration process is complete, and manages hybrid CLM & EMM devices individually
- 3 Automated interface selection
 - Automated interface selection Auto-selects the appropriate endpoint management interface, which is transparent for the administrator
- 4 Identity separation
 - Separates personal/corporate identity (location/applications/data & forms) to ensure user privacy
- 5 One user = one license
 - License requirement calculations are as easy as counting users within Active Directory or Service Store
- 6 Flexible deployment
 - Offers flexible deployment options - on-premises or in the cloud

How Matrix42 Unified Endpoint Management Licensing works

- Matrix42 UEM licenses are issued on a per user basis. That means one license for each user that covers access to an unlimited number of endpoints, including desktop PCs, laptops, hybrid- and mobile devices
- If device-based licensing is preferred, customers can choose to purchase Matrix42 Corporate and Matrix42 Corporate for Mobile
- It is not possible to mix device- and user-based licensing for Matrix42 products.
- All Matrix42 UEM product bundles are available via the Matrix42 Cloud

How to upgrade to Matrix42 Unified Endpoint Management

- Customers can upgrade from Matrix42 Virtual, Physical or Silverback to any of the UEM product suites
- Customers may also switch to user-based pricing during the upgrade
